All about tomorrow ;-)

Castle of Cecilienhof

Schloss Cecilienhof is in the Northern part of the New Gardens in Potsdam. It was the last palace built by the Hohenzollern family. Kaiser Wilhelm II of Germany built it for his son Crown Prince Wilhelm of Germany and the crown prince's wife Duchess Cecilie of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. The house was designed by Paul Schultze-Naumburg to look like an English Tudor country house and was built between 1914 and 1917.

Cecilienhof was the location of the Potsdam Conference between July 17 and August 2, 1945. The palace is now a museum and Hotel.

Alexandrowka

Alexandrowka is the Russian Colony in the north of Potsdam. It consists out of thirteen wooden houses in Russian style, which were built between 1826 and 1827 on special wish of the former Prussian king, Friedrich Wilhelm III. Originally the colony was the home of the Russian singers of the First Prussian Regiment of the Guards.

Tropical Islands

Tropical feelings and a warm breeze in their face, that is what most of the students first felt when they arrived at Tropical Islands.

Having just finished the practical tests, this day of free activity was heartily welcomed. So the students (and guides...) were happy about having enough time to do whatever they want until lunch.

After lunch the students had to form eight teams to again compete against each other in a jungle rallye.

But now no medals were to win and fun was the only aim for this challenge. The rallye consisted of 4 different parts in which not the theoretical knowledge but the sportive capabilities took the centre stage. First of all a course had to be completed in a “3-leg-run” where two competitors were bound to each other on their legs. Afterwards a second course has to be done on a playing ground and a third in the water, each as a relay. The fourth part was some kind of theatre where every team was asked to promote themselves in a small play or to build a human pyramid. For each of these parts an independent jury gave points and afterwards declared all the teams winners.

The day ended with a very nice magic-show on the South-Sea-stage which was located at two small islands amidst the biggest swimming pool in Tropical Islands. Fig. magic show

The magician spirits ladies away and let them reappear and did many very spectacular tricks. There was also an acrobat who showed various figures in combination with handstands on columns. All in all it has been a very exciting day for all of us on the one hand but also a relaxing day.
